"PEACE AND QUIET"

The young editor of "The Daily Toro" unwittingly invites trouble from a nice arrangement of the type and news items of his paper. The result is that people who are libelled call upon him and give him a very bad time. In despair from his sufferings he takes refuge in a sanitarium only to discover that the unhappy victims of his newspaper libels are also inmates of the same haven of rest. After a game of cross purposes the young editor marries the young lady whom he had accidentally libelled in his paper and a wedding brings all parties "peace and quiet".
